Nazis' Escape Ires British

Our Daily Bread

Sliced Thin by The Editor

ALEX. H. WASHBURN

Funny—When It's Somebody Else

Americans raged against the Navy Department as investigation of the Pearl Harbor fiasco disclosed that our officers and men were either asleep or ashore when the Japs pulled their December 7th sneak play—but something of the same sort occurring in the British forces last night only causes us to smile.

It's funny only when it happens to the other fellow.

The British had had the three German man-of-war, Battleships Scharnhorst and Gneisenau, and Cruiser Prinz Eugen, cooped up in Brest harbor, just across the English Channel, ever since the fall of France. But last night the three ships, helped with an "umbrella" of German warplanes, escaped through the whole English Home Fleet.

Nothing like it has happened to Britain in her 100-year mastery of the English Channel—and judging from what the London newspapers say in the Associated Press dispatch at the top of today's front page the British people are hot against their high sea and air commands.

Funny, at this distance. And yet confusing, of course. Somebody made a mistake, of course. But at least in England and the United States when a mistake is made you HEAR ABOUT IT. Comforting also to the unfortunate man or men who may eventually be blamed for it. Career finished. But they won't be executed. They won't be mysteriously stricken with a "heart attack" fashion for German generals caught off base in Russia.

The Test

There is no need to work up a temperature of 105 degrees because Democratic Party Chairman Flynn said the country ought to elect a Democratic House and Senate this fall. That is what party chairmen are for—to plug for election of members of their party.

Flynn put it badly, urging election of Democrats on the ground that only such could properly support the President. That is nonsense as Flynn probably knows himself. It is also bad politics, as the President knows, with the memory of President Wilson's appeal for a Democratic Congress in 1918 far fresher in his memory than in Flynn's. He remembers that all Wilson's appeal was to present him with both a House and Senate predominantly Republican. So the President disavows Flynn's appeal, and rightly so.

The people are too sensible to be much moved by partisan appeals at a time like this. What's wanted in Congress today is men of the highest ability we can get, men eager and loyal to support their country in a fight that may well be one for its very existence. Whether they are members of one party or another is not going to cut much ice with the majority of the voters this year, and the chairman of both parties will do well to remember it.

What both parties ought to do is prune off their own dead limbs, and present the electorate with candidates of definitely good qualifications. Our prediction is that fatheads, drones, players-on-prejudice, exploiters of the purely political, gravy-boatsmen, windbags, johnny-come-latelys, coat-tailriders, supporters and critics for purely political motives nonentities, misers of franks, second-guessers, hand-wringers and incompetents, are all going to have a rough road to ride to election this fall.

Party politics as such may as well adjourn for the duration.

We need congressmen who will support the war, not blindly, but intelligently and aggressively. We need critics who will criticize alertly, understandingly, and always with the sole purpose of making the war effort more effective.

The country, which is pouring out its blood and its money to win the war, is in no mood for partisan posturing by Flynn or anybody else. The party that can present the electorate with the best list of congressional candidates, intelligently alert to prosecute the war with effectiveness, ought to get a majority regardless of which party it is; preferably if it is a combination of both.

We need all the brains, ability, and real patriotism in Congress that we can summon there, and the country is not greatly concerned about which party furnishes them.

2 Jap Bombers Knocked Down

Reported to Have Hit Own Troops in Philippines

WASHINGTON —(P)— Destruction of two Japanese dive bombers by U.S. anti-aircraft guns during increasing fighting in the Philippines was reported Friday by the war department.

The dive-bombers actively supporting aggressive enemy patrol action mistakenly bombed and machine-gunned their own infantry, with heavy casualties, the communiqué said.

Victims of the mistaken attack were identified as elements of the 122nd Japanese regiment of Gen. Akira Nara's 65th division.

Northern Neighbor

All our good neighbors are not south of the border, for Canada probably has been a good friend to the United States longer than any nation. Do you know these Canadian questions?

1. Which are the maritime provinces of Canada? The prairie provinces?

2. Who is prime minister of Canada and where is his official residence?

3. Name a large Canadian city farther south than Seattle, Wash., the largest city in Canada, and a Canadian city famous for its wheat market.

4. What is Canada's legal relation to the British Empire?

5. Name two big lakes in northwestern Canada which are famous in fact and in adventure fiction.

Singapore Holds on, But Net Is Drawing Tight

Japanese Concede They Are Still Two Miles From City's Heart

By the Associated Press

A terse, dramatic message from Lt. Gen. A. E. Percival disclosed that the British defenders of Singapore still were putting up "stout resistance against great odds" Friday as Japanese siege armies pressed within two miles of the city's heart.

A Singapore communiqué at 5 p.m. (5 a.m. C. W. T.) indicated the union jack continued to wave over the island metropolis.

Japanese shock troops were now fighting in the city's suburbs.

Even the Tokyo radio spoke of "firm resistance" at Singapore.

Net Closes Tighter

Domestic official Japanese news agency conceded the invaders were still two miles from downtown Singapore, but while the British fought a delaying action it was apparent the net was steadily drawing tighter.

In the Dutch Indies the NEI command reported a temporary slackening of the many-pronged Japanese drive aimed at Java amid ominous hints that the United Nations high command might be preparing to fall back to Australia.

Dispatches from Batavia said the Dutch, fully aware that the fall of Singapore would open the flood gates for an all-out Japanese assault on Java and Dutch Sumatra, were determined to resist against any odds.

"We will go on fighting and damn the consequences," a semi-official spokesman declared.

Dutch Determined

The spokesman said the Dutch would never abandon their rich tropical islands without a fight even if Gen. Sir Archibald Wavell's supreme Allied command decided the best strategy would be to surrender Java and Sumatra bases and withdraw to Australia.

The Dutch command said "scorched earth" destruction of the harbor works at occupied Macassar, chief port on Celebes island, north of Java, had been so effective that "the enemy will not find anything of use to him."

The Macassar harbor area was reported still in flames.

In the 14-day-old siege of Singapore latest official dispatches said the Japanese invasion hordes were pressing violent air and artillery attacks on the last toehold of British defense with heavy fighting raging about the Macritchie reservoir in the center of the island.

"Shelling has been frequent on forward areas and on Singapore town," a British communiqué belaying a Rome radio broadcast which asserted the Japanese flag was already flying over Raffles Square in downtown Singapore.

Australian Law Body Convened

Called Feb. 20; Hear Report on Pacific Crisis

CANBERRA, Australia (AP)—Prime Minister John Curtin announced Friday that "because of the continued deterioration of the situation in the Pacific the Australian parliament has been summoned to meet February 20.

Curtin's announcement was interpreted to mean parliament would be convened in secret session almost immediately after it assembled. It was apparent the prime minister intended to report the latest facts in the Pacific situation.

The decision to summon parliament was represented as emphasizing the seriousness of news from the Pacific war zones, and follows the request of opposition leaders to convene the legislative body earlier than March 11, the original date set.

Fire Course in Defense Monday

But 25 More Volunteer Firemen Needed at City Hall

TALBOT FEILD, Jr., chairman of the Hempstead county Civilian Defense council, announced Friday that plans are being made to begin training classes for auxiliary firemen Monday; however, 25 more volunteers will be necessary for the group to work effectively.

Only 11 more people had volunteered up to noon Friday. The total for Thursday afternoon and night was 48.

The defense office in the city hall will remain open Friday night from 7 to 9 o'clock.

U. S. Being Licked, Says Texas Solon

WASHINGTON —(P)—Representative Summers (Dem., Tex.) veteran chairman of the Judicial Committee, solemnly told the house Thursday "We're being licked," and cried out to Congress to rouse the nation to its danger.

"My God," he shouted, "we are going to let the hope of the ages perish from this earth because of our unworthiness, because we, as did France, insist upon business as usual."

He said that even though he had not found an awakened public consciousness, "The American people have got the stuff in them to do there until Sunday."

Jungle Beasts Dodge the War

Soldiers Seldom Contact Animals in Malaya

By DAN DELUCE
AP Feature Service

RANGOON — The jungle beasts of Malaya are among the world's best war dodgers, according to that renowned natural scientist, Tommy Atkins.

British troops, who have been fighting through dark green forests along the long, bony peninsula, reported few encounters with elephants, bears, leopards, deer and other denizens.

In these forests, light filters down through 50 feet of dripping foliage and gives soldiers the feeling they are at the bottom of an aquarium tank.

'False Alarm' Birds

For hours at a time infantry patrols see no wild life. The stillness is broken only by shrill calls of hidden birds. Calls which resemble the army's air raid signal whistles. The soldiers have nicknamed them "false alarms."

If this were the dry season, both the British and Japanese would have probably tried jungle fires to hamper the enemy and cause animal stampedes. But this is the monsoon period and the jungle is successfully sheltering its own.

The Malaya war's most dangerous role is nevertheless being played by animals—pigs and cattle.

Called "mine sweepers" by the Japanese, the animals are driven across mined areas, detonating concealed explosives.

The rivers along the West Malay coast team with crocodiles, but it is unknown how many Japanese troops may have been victims while swimming across in inflated rubber belts.

The monkeys are proving to be born looters. They slip into evacuated villages and carry off small articles overlooked in the scorched earth policy.

The whine of shells or drone of planes throw them into instant panic, but they usually remember to hang on to their booty.

Down at Fort Knox

At Fort Knox, Ky., the other day they named the main parade ground Brooks Field. The honor was for Pvt. Rvt. Robert H. Brooks, a Negro and the first member of the armored forces killed in the present war. Private Brooks was killed in the Philippines the day after Pearl Harbor.

And now along comes Sen. Harry S. Truman of Missouri to write another epic of a private into the Congressional Record. In this instance, the private was in the southern army in the Civil War.

The eloquence of Pvt. Johnny Allen, of Mississippi, gave the Senator an opportunity to quote a newspaper from his bailiwick which said: "Let's not forget the private. He is the gentle man who bears the brunt of the battle; he is the hero of every American war... the best soldier in the world."

Pvt. Johnny Allen made considerable use of his lack of commission, too, when he was running for congress against the Confederate General Tucker.

The doughty general closed one of his speeches by saying: "Seventeen years ago last night, my fellow citizens, after a hard-fought battle on yonder hill, I bivouacked under yonder clump of trees. Those of you who remember, as I do, the times that tried men's souls, will not forget their humble servant when the priates shall be held."

In those days, that was potent political medicine but Private Allen had some that was stronger. After praising the brave general and saying that what he said was very true about his having slept in yon clump of trees, Private Allen added:

"It is also true, my fellow citizens, that I was videte picket, and stood guard over him while he slept. Now then, fellow citizens, all of you who were generals, and had privates to stand guard over you while you slept, vote for General Tucker; and all of you who were privates and stood guard over the generals while they slept, vote for Pvt. John Allen."

That election marked the beginning of Private Allen's 16 years in congress.

For the sake of the record, Washington ought to make a volume out of its civilian defense trials and tribulations. The latest: For weeks, the District of Columbia OCD has been drumming into the populace the formula for its air raid alarms—five short blasts at half-second intervals, repeated three times.

The fact that we had no sirens didn't keep the OCD from publicizing its formula. Now we've got sirens, 24 bright new electric ones, the first of the batch that will blanket the city. But we haven't got the formula.

The new sirens were not designed to blast at half-second intervals. The best they will do is toot every three seconds. And, according to the manufacturer, that's about the best any big sirens will do. So D. C. has got to learn itself a new alarm.

party given by Mrs. Roy Anderson and Mrs. Thompson Evans, Jr., at the home of the former Thursday afternoon.

Eight tables were arranged in the reception rooms, which were aglow with handsome gladioli in shades ranging from pastel pinks to deep scarlets. On the dining table was noted a large heart filled with dainty pastel flowers.

Scores were counted following the spirited games with the high score being awarded to Mrs. Alfred Branman. Mrs. Dorsey McIna, Jr., received the bingo prize. A lovely gift was presented to the honoree.

During the afternoon the hostesses served a delicious dessert course which further carried out the chosen Valentine motif.

Colonel Skeffington took off his tall hat with a flourish. Madame von Ein greeted him cordially. He smiled at Paris.

"How are you, sonny?"

"Very well, sir, thank you, Colonel Skeffington."

"Yes, sir."

"Come in the house."

DR. ALEXANDER Q. TOWER had lived in Kings Row for eight years. No one was quite sure where he had come from. Such arrivals were few in Kings Row professional ranks. Usually, if a new doctor or lawyer moved in, it was only after looking over the field and consulting with the bunks and business men. Dr. Tower had settled here without any preliminaries.

A few women called. They found Mrs. Tower a quiet, well-bred lady, but singularly uncommunicative. So far as anyone knew, Dr. Tower had never had a patient. After a while the office rooms remained shuttered, and Dr. Tower was seen less and less frequently.

It was said on the authority of Lucius Curley, the banker, that Dr. Tower was "well fixed"—the regulation phrase describing anyone of ample means. Opinion and inclination had been swaying for two or three days. Boys had begun to notice Cassandra more and more, and this was the first chance they had had to see her at home. But gradually it seemed indeed that everybody was going to Louise's.

There were only five guests in the Tower parlor when Parrish arrived.

"I don't know why everybody's so late," she said to Parrish. "I invited ever and ever so many." "Oh, well," he said casually, "you know how awful busy everybody is on Saturdays. Come on, let's play something. What do you want to play, Cassie?"

The party was a failure.

He saw Dr. and Mrs. Tower talking quietly together. Dr. Tower was speaking very rapidly and Mrs. Tower said "sh-h" when Parrish came into the hall. He repeated polite party speeches to them, and Dr. Tower bowed gravely. Mrs. Tower smiled.

"Thank you," she said gently in response to his formality. "I hope you'll come again."

Parrish decided that Louise had been very mean to give this party the same day as Cassandra's. He believed she must have done it "on purpose."

At the end of the next week the school principal received a note from Dr. Tower saying that he was withdrawing Cassandra from school.

WHATEVER HAPPENS IT'S IN THIS BOOK!

Complete strategy maps of every front—some in color—together with first-hand background by experts of The Associated Press at home and abroad.

AN ATLAS OF WAR

It is no ordinary map that interests 60,000,000 readers in the United States every week, as well as millions more in Canada. Such popularity is commanded only by the Background Maps of Wide World Features, the great affiliate of The Associated Press. They are the most complete, up-to-date graphic strategy maps of the world's war fronts issued anywhere in America today.

So popular have they become that readers have asked for them in a special book.

That book is now available—16 full pages, some in color, mapping every arena of war. But it is no mere reprint of the weekly maps you see in this paper.

Every map has been especially designed for this book by the same expert map staffs that produce the weekly background maps. Every page has been prepared for every eventuality.

Wide World War Book is your permanent guide to the course of the war.

And it is an authoritative guide, including background in picture and story, in addition to the maps, supplied by leading experts of The Associated Press at home and abroad.

Only The Associated Press and Wide World Features with unparalleled facilities all over the world could produce anything like the Wide World War Book.

There is drama behind its production—behind the production of the weekly Background Maps.

Two staffs are primarily responsible for the weekly maps—experts in Washington and in New York.

In Washington map researchers, close to the source of strategic information, supply the background for these maps. In New York another staff of experts—the artists—draw the maps. Sometimes a finished map is discarded at the last minute to meet some sensational new news development. When that happens Washington swings into action, New York swings into action, and a brand new background map is ready on deadline. Just as often these maps are ahead of the news, anticipate big events. Detailed maps of the Russian front showing where Hitler would strike were in editors' hands the morning Hitler struck!

The experience of all this has gone into your Wide World War Book which this paper will print on February 14. The book covers every area of the globe, shows the broad general strategy of these zones.

There are detailed maps on Hawaii, the Panama Canal, and Alaska, three keys to the Pacific; a full page of the Pacific as the admirals see it, a full page of the treasure islands—Dutch East Indies; a full page on the Asiatic frontier, showing just how an allied offensive would likely be sprung; maps of Singapore, Australia, the Atlantic battle zone, Europe, the Mediterranean and its three iron doors—Gibraltar, Suez and the Dardanelles; the Russian front, the Middle East (Arabian nightmare), a view of the world from the poles and finally, a full two-page spread of the entire world showing how Uncle Sam delivers the goods over seven seas in the struggle to crush the Axis.

No other map book is available like this.

Your Sugar Ration Card

Average American Uses 74 Pounds Sugar a Year

By HERMAN ALLEN 4
If you're an average American you ate 74 pounds of sugar last year, about 1½ pounds a week. To you, sugar rationing means first of all that the shopper in your home will be able to buy less than two-thirds of that for you this year.

What will this mean to the average American's innards? Will he get enough to keep healthy? There's a twinkle-eyed little lady in the Department of Agriculture's Home Economics Bureau who has the answer.

"Why," she chuckled, "most of us eat a lot more sugar than we need anyway. We just eat it because we like our coffee or our strawberries better that way. Look here!"

What You Need

She reached in her desk and pulled out a table that her bureau had prepared. It shows how much sugar is needed a week by men and women and children of various ages. Here it is:

Children
9-12 months	1 ounce
1-3 years	3 ounces
4-6 years	8 ounces
7-9 years	10 ounces
10-12 years	12 ounces

Girls
13-15 years	1 lb.
16-20 years	12 ozs.
Boys
13-15 years	1 lb.
16-20 years	1 lb., 4 ozs.

Women
Moderately active	1 lb.
Very active	1 lb., 4 ozs.
Sedentary	11 ozs.
Pregnant	12 ozs.
Nursing	1 lb.

Men
Moderately active	1 lb., 4 ozs.
Very active	1 lb., 12 ozs.
Sedentary	1 lb.

Spreading It Thin

"Three quarters of a pound would be spreading it pretty thin," she admitted, "if we had to have all the sugar in this table in the form of just plain white sugar. But it includes all that you get in sirups, molasses, jellies and preserves and candy as well as white, brown and maple sugar."

"Besides that, the rationing plan is on a person-by-person basis. That means Mother can buy 3 year-old Buster's ration and have some of it left over for herself and Buster's father."

"So the situation may not be so terrible as it sounds. We'll just have to wait and see how bad it is."

Sugarless Preserves

Price Administrator Henderson has said that sugar is being put aside for next summer's home canning season, but the Home Economics Bureau has a solution in case the housewife can't get enough for all her plums and strawberries.

You can put up preserves without sugar. If you don't know how, write the Superintendent of Public Documents, Washington, D. C., for Home Canning pamphlet No. FB-1762. Enclose 10¢ in stamps or wellwrapped coin.

If you like a bottle of pop or a piece of candy now and then, you'll probably find the pop less sweet, and your favorite candy bar may be out of stock occasionally. Commercial sugar users bought 40 pounds for every American in 1941 but are to get only 27 pounds this year.

Mascot Suspended 'Til He Smartens Up

Shawnee, Okla.—(P)—Rags II, the fire department's new mascot, is on leave at the home of Fireman Sherman Casey until he grows up and learns more about the pitfalls of life.

Young Rags, who replaced the original Rags after the latter was killed by a car in the line of duty, is not losing his status as a regular "fireman" however.

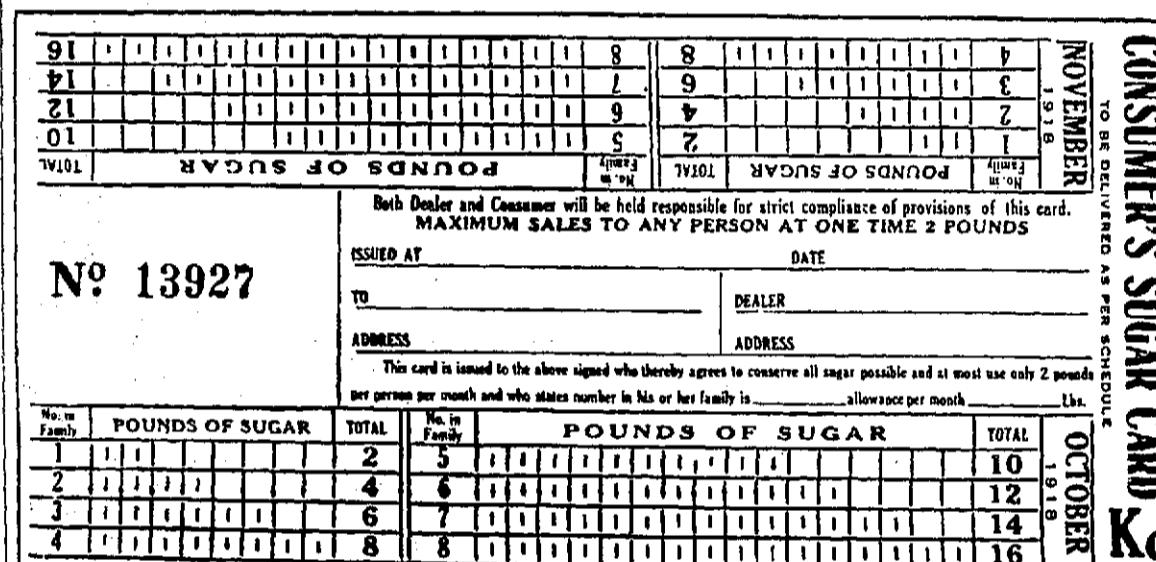

"Rags still is a member of the department," officials pointed out.

"But he was hit twice within two days, once by an automobile and again by a fire truck. Nothing serious—he was just bruised. But we want to farm him out a while until he learns to protect himself."

You'll Be Carrying Sugar Card Like This 1918 Number

Doddering oldsters who cut down on sweets during the World War will recall carrying this card when they went to the grocery store. Sugar rationing cards soon to be issued will probably look a good deal like this one.

Cripps May Come to U.S.

Britain's Ex-Envoy May Sit In Capital Councils

By MINTON BRONNER NEA Service Staff Correspondent

Washington—London gossip has it that Sir Stafford Cripps, who has just relinquished his important post as British Ambassador to Russia and returned to England, may be named a full Minister of State to sit on an allied war council in Washington.

If that eventuates it will bring to America one of the strangest characters in British public life:

An attorney for the rich who plugs for the poor.

An ardent Church of England man, who became a rabid Socialist.

A bookish recluse, who became a super soap-boxer.

A Socialist who was so Leftist that the party fired him.

An envoy to Russia so successful that the same party thinks of him as a future Labor Prime Minister.

Cripps, like his father, the first Bacon Parrotor, is a sample of the high-brows of the upper crust in England, who have in the past twenty years been turning to the Labor party, who has a Socialist party.

Sir Stafford Cripps, born in 1889, is a graduate of Winchester College and University College of London, becoming a barrister of the Middle Temple in 1913. Fourteen years later he could put the coveted letters "K.

He was elected to Parliament for East Bristol as Laborite, and soon made his mark in the House of Commons. For a brief period, 1930-31, he was Solicitor General.

As the years passed, Sir Stafford became more and more an ardent admirer of Soviet Russia and, in consequence, more of a Leftist in the Labor party. So much so that the executives of that party formally excommunicated him. But he went right on.

His special target, however, was the late Neville Chamberlain, then Tory Prime Minister. Constantly he attacked him as the great appeaser, who played up to a German who was bound to be a foe, and who ignored a Russia that might be a powerful friend.

After the war broke out and after Chamberlain fell, Prime Minister Churchill named him as Ambassador to Russia. Cripps did not wear Russia away from its neutrality pact with Germany. Hitler did that himself by tearing up the pact and making war upon the Soviet.

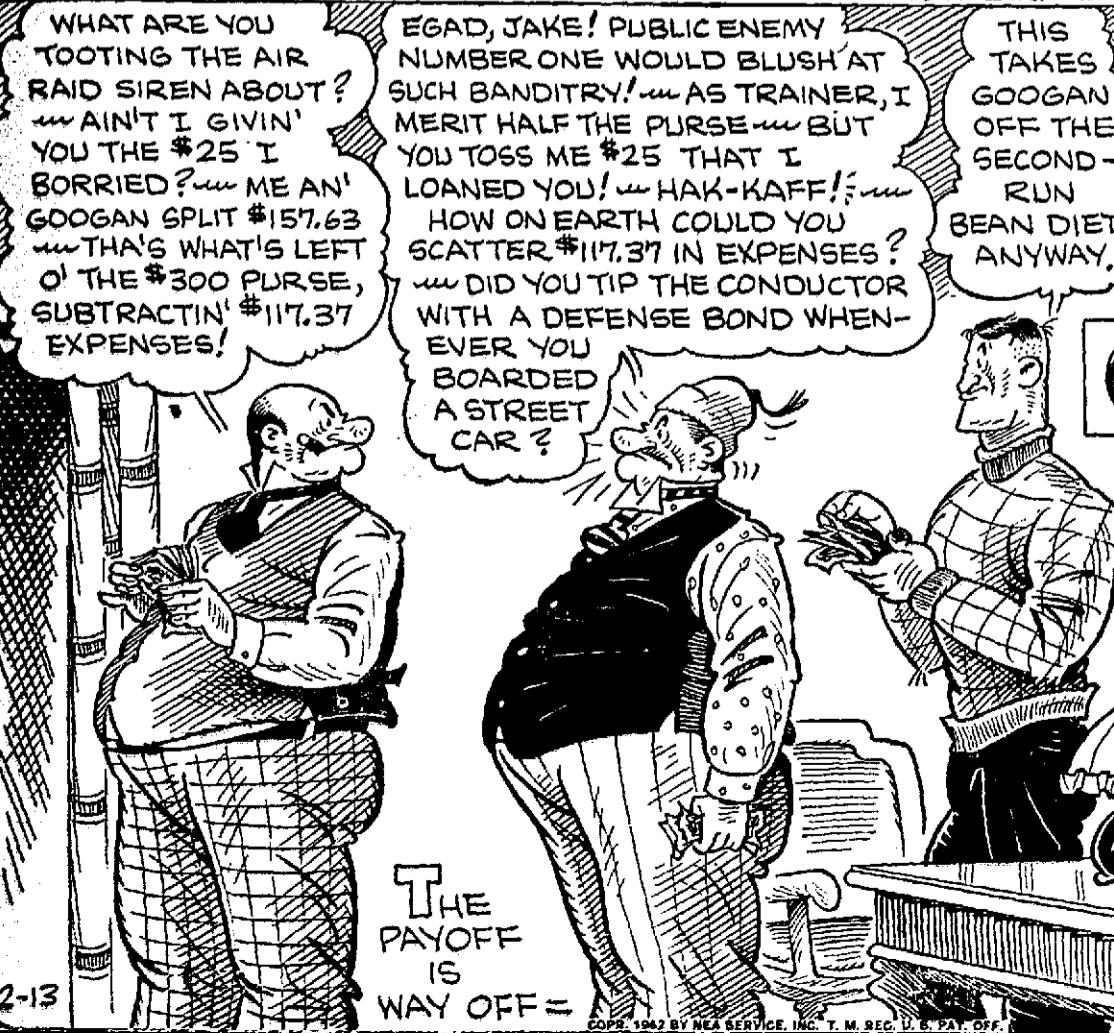

But it was Cripps who largely convinced Stalin that the Britain of Churchill was a radically different thing from the Britain of Chamberlain. The Russians trusted him, because they knew how he had battled for them.

Oddly enough, though still excommunicated, the Labor party looks to him for future leadership. Prominent labor leaders, whom this writer knew in England and who have been on visits to this country lately, have all told me that when and if the Labor party ever assumes control of the government, Cripps will be the best bet for Premier.

As a profound lawyer, polished man of the world, keen debater and fighting orator, they said the ranks of labor outside of London favored Cripps for chieftain. And they were at pains to explain that London is no more all England than New York is all America when it comes to public opinion.

Producing Food War-Time Job for the Farm

1942 Farm Production to Be Largest in Nation's History

"The war-time job of farmers is to provide the food and fiber for victory," L. W. Duggan, director of the southern division of the Triple-A said in an address to cotton farmers and agricultural workers at a cotton insurance meeting at Memphis.

"The job is well under way," Duggan continued. "Cargoes of food are moving in ever-increasing volume across the Atlantic to Britain. More may be needed for other people as the struggle goes on. Those needs will be supplied."

"Our farm production this year will be the largest in our history, even larger than we planned when we first set forth the goals for 1942. We are looking for much heavier demands for some farm products next year and perhaps the year following. The American farmers will meet the test."

"One of the reasons why I speak with so much confidence on this score is the faith I have in the effectiveness of the national farm program. Designed to pull agriculture out of the pit of depression in peace time, the program is already being geared to the needs of war. Speaking for the AAA, I can say that the whole machinery from top to bottom is now functioning as a unit to further the prosecution of the war on the farm front. I am convinced that the longer we are in the war the more we will come to realize how vital the farm program is to the whole national economy. I am impatient with the talk heard in certain quarters that now is the time to start whittling away the farm program. It is much nearer the truth to say that now, more than ever before, is the time to strengthen the farm program in every detail. All along the line we are strengthening the programs for business, for labor and for industry. We can ill afford to neglect or weaken agriculture in this time of crisis."

"The farmers enter the conflict much better prepared than they were in 1917. They have large reserves of cotton, corn and wheat. They are in a position to meet the most drastic demands of the war without doing violence to the agriculture plant. We will see no plowing up of forty million acres of grassland this time. Our agriculture problem will not be aggravated by wasteful exploitation of soil resources as it was following the first war."

In discussing crop insurance for cotton, Mr. Duggan said that there are three fundamental principles that must be kept in mind in connection with the program. They are: First, it must be soundly, equitably and economically administered.

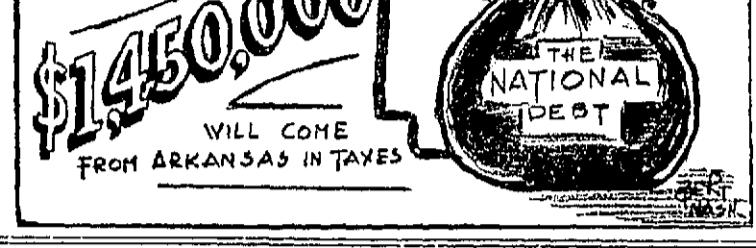

Second, the program rates must be based on sound insurance principles based on equity and not what the traffic will bear.

Third, is the amount of indemnities paid and the method of arriving at the indemnities.

We must at all times remember that the farmers, themselves, are paying the bill for crop insurance and they must be convinced that they are all getting a square deal in the matter of indemnity payments.

We, the Women

You Can't Be Too Busy to Do Some War Work

By RUTH MILLETT

There are two types of women who are already out of step today. One is the woman who says, "I would like to be doing SOME kind of war or community welfare work—but I just don't have the time."

The other is the kind of woman who still has leisure time.

The women who are in step with the nation's speeded-up war effort are those who feel that the woman who volunteered her services for the 1942 Fight Infantile Paralysis Campaign with the explanation: "I haven't much time. I am doing Red Cross work and I am an air raid warden. I have to be home when my children return from school each day. But I want to do what I can to help, because I have made the awful discovery that I have a few idle hours in my day. This is no year for having any free time, although we can't all be doing war work all of the time."

The woman who thinks she is too busy taking care of her own family to find time to take on any war or charity work is still thinking in terms of peace time. In war time, it is up to each one of us to find the time to contribute in some way to the great national effort.

In order to find the time we may have to cut out a few of the housekeeping frills and draft other members of the family into doing some of the house work. We may have to give up the hours we used to fill doing nothing (for instance, playing bridge) and substitute work companionship in Red Cross headquarters for play companionship. We may have to put our children on their own a little more, expecting them as well as the grown-up members of the family, to cooperate. But if we really want to, we can find the time to do something for the good of some one besides ourselves and our families.

As for the woman who has more time than she knows what to do with, well, there's just no excuse for her any more. Every hour she has is needed today, and it doesn't take much searching to find where those idle hours can be put to good account.

We should be ashamed today of wasting hours—or not spending them to the best advantage—as we are of any other kind of waste.
